

Ruth Part Nine - Questions
November 22, 2009

1). a) The threshing floor is a picture of judgment. In the Book of Ruth, the fact that Boaz would be at his threshing floor at a specific time was a certainty. For Ruth, what part of the threshing floor experience was NOT a certainty?

b). And correspondingly, what is this picturing for the Christian? What does a favorable result at the threshing floor depend on?

2). Why was it necessary for Ruth to marry someone within her husband's family?

3). Staying only within the context for the Christian (since that is the only facet that the Book of Ruth deals with), what is the inheritance, and when (and how) was it lost?

4). The six days of work in Genesis chapter 1 is a type picture of much the same thing we see in the Book of Ruth; it shows the process from spiritual immaturity to spiritual maturity. What do the days represent?

Day One =

Day Two =

Day Three =

Day Four =

Day Five =

Day Six =

5). Is it scripturally correct to be bold in relation to journey? Is it okay to be bold in our expectation of a favorable response at our future threshing floor? Should we be ambivalent or purposeful? What does Ruth show us in respect of this?
